

Qonto opens new 11,000 sqm European headquarters in Paris to support its next phase of European growth

Paris, September 24, 2026. Qonto, the leading European business finance solution, today unveils its new headquarters “Qonto Bonne Nouvelle” (“Good News” in French) in a landmark building in central Paris. At 11,000 sqm, the site is nearly twice the size of Qonto’s previous Paris office, with 900 desks across nine floors.

The move marks a new chapter for the company, which now serves more than 750,000 businesses across eight European markets. The new headquarters will support its next phase of European growth.

A landmark Paris site with nearly two centuries of business and commercial history

The building is located at 6 Impasse Bonne Nouvelle, on a site with nearly two centuries of commercial history. The Bazar Bonne-Nouvelle opened there in the 1830s as an early Paris department store and business centre. After it closed following a fire in 1930, the current building was constructed as a Post Office in 1953 by architects Joseph Bukiet and André

Gutton. The complex underwent major structural renovation led by Covéa Immobilier with architecture firm PCA-Stream, which preserved the building's concrete and metal architecture while restoring its original volumes, opening it onto the surrounding neighbourhood and adding planted outdoor space.

At 11,000 sqm, it nearly doubles Qonto's previous Paris footprint and gives the company a long-term base in France for its operations across eight European markets. Spread over nine floors, the headquarters provides 900 desks, 250+ breakout seats, 55 meeting rooms, 90 phone booths and two conference spaces for company-wide gatherings of up to 425 people. It also includes three cafés, with an on-site barista service provided through Qonto's partnership with Trèfle, a French inclusive workplace-catering company employing and training people with disabilities.

A headquarters shaped by Qonto's culture and customers

For the first time since its launch in 2017, Qonto has been able to shape a headquarters around how the company works. As hybrid and remote work reshape the role of offices, Bonne Nouvelle supports different ways of working, from focused individual work and remote calls to team collaboration, shared decisions and company-wide gatherings.

It is also designed to keep Qonto's customers and culture visible as the company grows. Portraits feature entrepreneurs from across Europe, a meeting room is named after Qonto's first customer, a map shows its European footprint, and a listening point allows teams to hear customer recordings directly.

Qonto doubles down on its European ambition

Launched in 2017, Qonto has grown into one of Europe's leading business finance platforms. The company is entering a new chapter as it moves towards becoming a bank. Having applied for a Credit Institution licence in 2025, and subject to regulatory approval, Qonto would be able to offer broader financing, savings and payment capabilities directly within Qonto.

"Today marks an important milestone for Qonto. Together with our team of 1,700 Qontoers, we already serve more than 750,000 businesses across eight European markets, with millions of people using Qonto every day. Bonne Nouvelle is where we will build Qonto's next chapter. As we move towards becoming a bank, our ambition is clear: to become the AI-powered European champion of banking and finance management for SMEs," says Alexandre Prot, co-founder and CEO of Qonto. "Our new headquarters will bring our teams together and provide a long-term base for our continued growth across Europe. In 2026 alone, we have hired more than 450 people, and we will continue hiring."
